Pets as Therapy

Therapy dogs in schools are becoming increasingly popular as a means to provide emotional support and various therapeutic benefits to students. These dogs are not service dogs or emotional support animals; instead, they are trained to offer comfort and companionship in an educational setting.

Therapy dogs in schools serve several purposes, including reducing stress and anxiety, improving social and emotional well-being, and enhancing the overall learning environment. They can offer comfort to students who may be dealing with various challenges.

We are so very fortunate to be working with the Pets As Therapy organisation and are currently receiving visits from two volunteers and their pets. Please see the photo below when Sue and Buddy visited our EYFS children.
